| Why do you need compliance management anyway?

There are two primary reasons why you should consider compliance management.

It Improves Security Posture

One reason is that many compliance guidelines are devised with some of the industry's best practices in cybersecurity. So organizations who haven't thought about their cybersecurity can get started towards improved cybersecurity posture. For example: PCI DSS (Payment Card Industry Data Security Standards) was created to protect PoS (Point of Sale) units with over 12 controls specified by PCI Security Standards Council. Every organization that complies with it is bound to experience an increased level of data security and a decent level of cybersecurity posture.

Saves you from legal trouble

Another reason why you have to consider compliance management is to avoid getting into the trouble of non-compliance and punishment as a result of noncompliance. Since there is an increase in the number of cyber attacks around the globe, statutory and regulatory bodies have become more serious about the protection of the privacy rights of their citizens. As a result of this, they have enforced more severe punishments for non-compliance. Therefore, non-compliance in today's world can be costly.

| Challenges

- ✔ Lack of skilled team
- ✔ Overloaded compliance team
- ✔ Walled-off/siloed compliance functions
- ✔ Zero visibility
- ✔ Lack of automation/ Manual processes
- ✔ Change management

| The price you pay for non-compliance

- ▶ British Airways was fined £20m by the Information Commissioner's Office (ICO) for GDPR violations for failing to protect the personal information of more than 4,00,000 customers.
- ▶ The University of Texas MD Anderson Cancer Center was fined $4.3 million for the loss of information of 33,500 patients by HIPAA.
- ▶ Google paid a total of $43 million in fines for non-compliance with the EU's GDPR policy.
- ▶ Marriott International faced a colossal data breach that cost a loss of over 500 million customers. This has cost them a fine of a whopping $124 million.
- ▶ The least compliant industries are retail, financial services, and hospitality.
- ▶ There is a 27.5 % point decline in PCI DSS compliance since 2016.
