| The challenges

Staying afloat in the digital sea is a challenge, especially with the ever-evolving threats and increasing competition. Managing the high volume of alerts without any visibility of cybersecurity posture, IT infrastructure can render an easy checkmate in any cyber threat game. It stands even true for small and medium business owners who lack the skill set or have a limited team with no expertise in cyber security. The following are the challenges faced by most of the small and medium businesses when it comes to cybersecurity:

- ✓ Lack of centralized visibility
- ✓ No centralized solution for multiple cyber security challenges
- ✓ Absence of compliance-friendly reporting
- ✓ No team or lack of skilled experts

- ✓ No 24x7 monitoring
- ✓ Alert fatiguing caused as a result of high quantity of alerts
- ✓ Lack of categorization of security alerts
- ✓ Zero guidance on cybersecurity measures to be implemented
- ✓ No incident response planning
- ✓ Lack of data protection and file monitoring

| Enter SIEM - a single platform for 360-degree visibility & compliance

SIEM (Security Information and Event Management) solves these challenges. It engages in continuous monitoring through seamless monitoring. It comes with SOAR (Security Orchestration and Automated Response) that automatically caters to alerts assisting security personnel to focus on what is more important.

Driven by Artificial Intelligence and Machine Learning, SIEM can automatically analyze the bad from the good, and the anomalous from the usual. It goes beyond alert monitoring and enables security experts by providing context-based analysis on alerts improving the effectiveness and accuracy of manual triage.

It is fully managed by experts who add a human touch assisting it to work at its full potential. It helps you achieve all your compliance goals seamlessly through continuous collection of logs and events and generation of reports that can be easily used for compliance.

With SIEM you can carve new avenues of growth for your business being stress free from the worry of disruptions from cyber attacks through expert driven incident response planning.
